Legendary Resistance (2/Day).

Crown of Echoes.

Immune to psychic damage; advantage on saves against being turned.

The Hollow Crown (Phase 2, 105 HP).

The crown darkens and he rises: he gains a 2nd Multiattack strike, and Hollow Echo recharges on 4-6.

◆ HOLLOW ECHO (Recharge 5-6)

He is empty — he only reflects. He unleashes the single LARGEST hit dealt to him since his last turn, as necrotic, against the one who dealt it. DC 16 CON save halves. Don't nova — pace your damage or eat your own crit.

ACTIONS

Multiattack.

Two Ruined Greatsword attacks (three in Phase 2).

Ruined Greatsword. +9, reach 10 ft.

16 (2d10+5) slashing plus 4 (1d8) necrotic damage.

Hollow Echo (Recharge 5-6).

See the box above — reflects your biggest hit back.

LEGENDARY ACTIONS (3)

Regal Step (1).

Moves up to half speed without provoking.

Withering Judgment (1).

One creature ≤30 ft.: DC 16 WIS or −1d4 to its next attack and save.

Echoing Slam (2).

One Greatsword attack; on a hit the target can't regain HP until the end of its next turn.

THE REVEAL (read aloud)

The king has not risen from this throne in a very long time. The crown has slipped; the eyes are only embers in an empty skull. He does not look at you. He simply waits to be struck — so that he can strike back.

THE SIGNATURE — HOLLOW ECHO

He only reflects.

On a recharge of 5-6 (4-6 in Phase 2), the King unleashes the single LARGEST amount of damage dealt to him since his last turn, as necrotic, against whoever dealt it. DC 16 CON halves. The lesson: don't nova. The barbarian who crits for 60 eats 60 back — pace your damage, spread it out, and the King has nothing big to echo.

THE FIGHT

Phase 1 → Phase 2 (at 105 HP).

The Hollow Crown darkens and the King rises from the throne: a 2nd Multiattack strike, and Hollow Echo comes back faster (4-6). The tempo jumps — the party's careful pacing matters even more.

The arena.

The ruined throne hall is the stage (art included). He begins seated — a still, dreadful tableau — and does not stir until struck or approached. Let the dread build.

The heart of it.

He never speaks, never gloats. He is a dead man reflecting the violence done to him. Tables that realize he only echoes THEM start to play differently — that turn is the encounter.
